

The Edinburgh Review, or Critical Journal, Vol. 143: For January, 1876;;; April, 1876 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Edinburgh Review, or Critical Journal, Vol. 143: For January, 1876;;; April, 1876 Art. I.1. Memoir of Sir James Dalrymple, First Viscount Stair. A Study in the History of Scotland and Scotch Law during the Seventeenth Century. By J.G. Mackay, Advocate. Edinburgh: 1873.2. The Stair Annals. By John Murray Graham. Edinburgh: 1875.3. William Carstairs. A Character and Career of the Revolutionary Epoch. By Robert Herbert Story, Minister of Rosneath. London: 1874. Scotland has not been fertile in great statesmen. During what may be called the kingly period of her history - from the accession of Robert II. to the death of James V. - the one thing essential to the well-being of the people, and to the defence of the country against English invasion, was to curb an overgrown, turbulent, and treacherous nobility; a task to which no man was found equal. At the great uprising of the Reformation a wider field was opened; nobler ends came into view. Knox, though not in the strict sense of the word a statesman, yet did the work of the greatest: he awoke a national life; he called into political existence the middle-classes of his countrymen. From various causes Scotland, in his time, took a place in the politics of Europe out of all proportion to her real power. But her statesmen, with the single exception of Murray, were unworthy of their opportunities. Maitland of Lethington has a great but undeserved reputation. He was a man, as Mr. Burton has shown, rather crafty than wise; he seems to have studied the subtleties of Italian politicians beyond the powers of his own brain; he fought with armour which he had not proved, and the result of all his tortuous devices was hopeless failure.
