

Trust in Love

Ali King is the owner of an antique company and at the top of her profession. She is about to collect a prestigious award for her work when she receives a call telling her that her sister is in a coma, she immediately returns to the UK from Paris where she has led a hedonistic lifestyle, to find she has become mother to Luca, who is a few months old. Ali makes a decision to take a year out of work to manage her life with Luca. This is totally new for her; she is also grieving for the loss of her sister. Ali sees an advertisement to renovate antiques and to clear an old family home the position includes accommodation for the duration of the contract, Ali gets the job. She meets Jess who has inherited the family home but loathes to be in it. They instantly feel attracted to each other but Jess presents as hostile and aloof. Jess will be away for most of the year complications arise when Jess returns unexpectedly and the two women are irresistibly drawn to each other. Jess has to overcome her distrust of women and Ali has to learn to trust that Jess will be there for her. However the past is difficult to leave and a lifestyle can be hard to change. Trust has a price.
